AnteoTech CEO Derek Thomson said, "We are very pleased to be signing our first European distributor agreement, with Apacor for the UK. The UK has a strong history of deploying antigen rapid testing in the battle against COVID-19. To control the spread of COVID-19 the UK's NHS has procured large volumes of rapid tests and deployed them across Britain. We believe that in the future the NHS's strategy for pandemic control will include ongoing screening and testing, which the UK has already rolled out through a number of programs, such as the recently announced Daily Contact Testing Pilot Scheme.

Apacor has a strong track record and experience in securing government tenders for diagnostic products, and we look forward to working with them to introduce the high sensitivity reader based EuGeni platform as a primary tool in control of COVID-19 to the private and public sector in the UK."

Apacor CEO Anthony Bellm said, "Apacor is delighted to be partnering with AnteoTech to represent the EuGeni range in the UK.

We are excited about our future collaboration and new developments in the pipeline, especially at a time when the world needs fast and reliable testing."
